

Short Biography – Dr. Xin Feng

Dr. Xin Feng is a promising young researcher in the field of medical imaging, with a dedicated focus on advancing innovative technologies. Currently she is an Associate Professor at the Chinese Academy of Sciences, specializing in the research and application of Magnetic Particle Imaging (MPI). A recipient of the "Beijing Science and Technology New Star" award, she also acts as a Committee Member of the Youth Working Committee, Chinese Society for Stereology. Dr. Feng holds 3 authorized U.S. invention patents and 5 authorized Chinese invention patents, and has contributed to the formulation of 1 MPI group standard. She has published over 20 academic papers in prestigious journals, including Science Advances and IEEE Transactions on Medical Imaging.